Amelia Marriette worked as the Keeper of Art in Devon in the UK, exhibiting the work of the internationally acclaimed artist, Antony Gormley and Damien Hirst to the South West coast of Britain. Following her redundancy from this post Amelia relocated to Austria in 2015. Her new book Walking into Alchemy: The Transformative Power of Nature, tells the story of her new life in Austria while also telling the story of a 15 kilometre walk that she completed 52 times in 52 weeks in the hills and mountains of Southern Austria. A book about nature, love, art, Shakespeare and about finding one's path in life.

"Just like many of Shakespeare's characters, Marriette wanders into the forest and finds herself transformed having discovered that beauty and hope are still abundant in this damaged world." Amazon International Review

"What a lovely book! All of us face challenges in our lives, but few realise the incredible healing power of movement and nature." Amazon Review

"A well-written book full of wonderful tales of nature, fulfilment, change and spiritual awakening." Amazon Review

"Forget 'Eat, Pray, Love' this book is Walk, Discover, Grow." Goodreads
